Buying an Overcoat in Detroit.

Yesterday morning a tall young man landed at the Union Depot with a bundle under his arm, and after three or four minutes spent in getting his bearings, he walked up Jefferson avenue and turned into a clothing store.

"Do you wish to try on some coats and vests for a dollar?" asked the proprietor, as he rushed from behind the counter.

"No, I guess not. Do you deal on the square?"

"My friend, dot is exactly what I does. I vas so square dot I loss $3,000 last year. Can I sell you an overcoat for ten dollars?"

"No, I guess not. Here is an overcoat that I bought of you four weeks ago."

"Bought of me?"

"Yes, I think you are the man. When I got it home we found that it was moth eaten. I can pick it to pieces in a dozen places."

"Is dot possible? Und how much you pay?"

"Eight dollars."

"My shtars! And what you vant now?"

"I want my money back."

"Vhell—vhell. My friend I am sorry for you. You seem like an honest poy, and it vhas too bad!"

"Yes, it was a swindle, I want my money back."

"Dear me, but I vish you vhas here yesterday. Let me explain to you. You bought dot coat four weeks ago?"

"Yes, four weeks ago to-day."

"Vhell, I had sold out to my cousin Philip shust one day before. Philip is not a square man."

"What have I got to do with Philip?"

"Let me explain. In dree days Philip makes assignment to my brudder Louis. Dot Louis is a leedle off. He would sheat your eye teeth away from you."

"Yes, but I haven't anything to do with Louis."

"Let me explain. Louis kept der place a week, und he gif a shattle mortgage to my fadder-law, und vhas bounced out."

"Don't know anything about that."

"Let me explain. My fadder-law was took mit a fit and died, and he leaf dis place to my wife. My wife was gone to Europe for two years, and she leaf me as agent. Now you see how it was. I gan not tell you who sold dot coat. May be it vhas Philip, may be Louis, may be my fadder-law. It couldn't haf been me, for I vhas in Shicago. If you leaf dot coat I will write to my wife. She is square, shust like me, and maybe she writes back you can take a linen duster and two white vests and call it all right."

"Say, this is a sneaking swindle," exclaimed the young man.

"May be it vhas. Philip was a great liar."

"I'll go to the police"

"Vhell, dot is all right; may be der police vhill help me catch Louis. I shnst found out last night dot he cut all der hind buttons off all der coats before he left."

"If you'll step out doors I'll mash you!"

"Vhell, I like to oblige you; but you see I vhas only agent for my wife."

"Well, you'll hear from me again, and don't you forget it!" said the victim as he went out.

"I hope so—I hope so. I like to make it all right. I vhas only agent for my wife, but I feel so square dot I take dot coat back for $3 if you want to trade it out in paper collars."

The past week in London is said to have been one of comparative dullness, only enlivened by the Emperor's meeting at Ischl, the the Lord Mayor's dinner to the Ministers, the extraordinary speech of Lord Salisbury accepting the Commons' amendments to the Arrears Bill, and Lord Dufferin's smart diplomatic practice and apparent success at Constantinople.

The army occupation of Egypt is to be re-inforced by the Third Division of the First Army Corps. A number of regiments have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for active service.

Oddities in a Sculptor's Gallery.

"I meet some very curious persons," said a sculptor to a Sun reporter. "For instance, you see me now trying to make a broken nose. This is the bust of a Southern merchant who died about a year ago, and his widow insists that, as he had a broken nose, this portrait of him should faithfully show the infirmity. But that is nothing. Look, see here!"

In the corner stood a model of a prepossessing young face, except that it was cross-eyed.

"I spent three days in trying to convince the mother of that girl that the omission would be proper and artistic, but all to no purpose. She insisted that it could not be a portrait without that peculiarity. I pleaded that the Grecian and Roman sculptors did not even represent the eyeball in its natural state, but the only answer was: 'Them fellers could do as they pleased. I want my darter's eyes just as they wuz.'"

"Not long ago a lady who came to criticise her husband's bust, said that although he was advanced in years, he had a rosy complexion!"

"A friend of mine rushed in here one day and breathlessly recounted how he had seen in Cavalry Cemetery a profile with two eyes, one of which was almost over the ear. Did I doubt his word? No, sir. I sat him right down here and showed him a line of infirm busts. He went away happy."

"There you see a bust that has no lips, I was going to say. That was made in obedience to the desire of a Wall-street broker. He insisted that his brother's lips were so thin that the red didn't show. I altered them a dozen times, and finally, to save my reputation, traced a light line to show where nature and myself know there must have been the contour of the lip."

"No, my experience has not been that people desire their friends' portraits idealized. The true artist can, and should, disguise what nature has overdone or not properly done without destroying the resemblance. But the majority of persons won't have it. In this, if nothing else, they enjoy realism."

—New York Sun.

No Time for It.

It is a question whether we can fairly or honorably plead that we have no time to attend to duties. Our pleasures may be crowded out, our plans for advancement or money-getting may not find sufficient time for their fulfillment, but if we have not time to fulfill the duties to others that our place in life demands something is wrong. Either we are doing too much needless work, or we are trying to do work that justly belongs to others.

It is told of Philip of Macedon that a poor woman came to his palace many times in vain to ask redress for wrongs done. After many attempts, she obtained an audience with the king only to be rebuffed by him, as she had been by his attendants.

"I am not at leisure to hear you," he replied abruptly when she began her story.

"No!" was her exclamation; "then you are not at leisure to be a king."

This view of the matter quite confounded the king. A few moments he thought upon it in silence; then he told the old woman to go on with her case, heard her to the end, and then gave orders that those who had wronged her should be punished and restitution made to her.

And ever after this he made it a point to listen to all applications brought before him, repeating to his courtiers who objected to his troubling himself the lesson that the poor woman had taught him, that if he was not at leisure to hear the plea of his humblest subject, he was not at leisure to be a king.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

Higginsport, O., Loses $100,000 Worth of Property by a Conflagration.

One and a half Million Feet of Lumber, a Large Tobacco Warehouse and Contents, and a Cooper Shop Destroyed.

A conflagration that involved a loss of about $100,000 occurred at Higginsport, Ohio, last night between seven and eight o'clock. It originated in a cooper shop belonging to the Boyd Manufacturing Company, and is believed to have been the accidental act of a number of small boys who were playing about the premises. The building was destroyed together with about one and a half million feet of sawed lumber in a yard adjoining. A large tobacco warehouse filled with tobacco, belonging to John Thomas, caught fire also and was totally consumed. In this building was about fifteen thousand dollars worth of tobacco, the property of Mr. Katz, which was not insured. Mr. Thomas in addition to the loss of the building and the tobacco stored therein lost about 5,000 bushels of coal. The loss of the Boyd Manufacturing Company is estimated to be $80,000 a part of which is covered by insurance.

Engines from Ripley and Augusta were sent for and arrived in time to be of some service in preventing the spread of the fire. The Ripley engine and fire company were taken down by the Bonanza. The other was brought by the Augusta ferry-boat.

There were very many others but space forbids further mention. All of the cottages were full. There seemed to be one large, happy family so pleasant were the relations existing. As evidence of the pleasure and profit derived from a stay here we would mention the fact that all of the cottages are already engaged for next year.

A very useful and excellent article now being introduced in this city, is a furniture polish manufactured and sold by Mr. J. Bischoff. It has been tried by very many of our leading citizens, who are warm in their recommendations of its excellence. It can be used on pianos, furniture of all kinds and fine vehicles. It gives a very superior and lasting gloss. The following who have used it are referred to: Hechinger Bros., A. Finch, State National Bank, Central Hotel, D. R. Bullock, W. W. Ball and E. Lambden. Flemingsburg, Ky., references: Fleming & Botts, C. N. Weedon, Judge W. S. Botts, J. W. Heffin, banker, E. E. Pearce, banker, H. Cushman, H. H. Sutt, L. F. Bright, W. S. Fant.

Rochester.

No name in Britain, however, is more interesting than that of Rochester, which admirably shows us how so many other Roman names have acquired a de-lusively English form, or have been mistaken for memorials of the English conquest. The Roman town was known as Durobriva, which does not in the least resemble Rochester, and, what is more, Bæda distinctly tells us that Justus, the first Bishop of the West Kentish See, was consecrated "in the city of Doru-brevi, which the English call Hrofes ceaster, from one of its former masters, by name Hrof." If this were all we knew about it, we should be told that Bæda clearly described the town as being called Hrof's chester, from an English conqueror Hrof, and that to contradict this clear statement of an early writer was presumptuous or absurd. Fortunately, however, we have the clearest possible proof that Hrof never existed, and that he was a pure creation of Bæda's own simple etymological guesswork. King Alfred clearly knew better, for he omitted this wild derivation from his English translation. The valuable fragment of a map of Roman Britain preserved for use in the medieval transcript known as the "Peutinger Tables," sets down Rochester as Rotibis. Hence it is pretty certain that it must have had two alternative names, of which the other was Durobriva. Rotibis would easily pass (on the regular analogies) into Rotifi ceaster, and that again into Hrof ceaster and Rochester; just as Rhtupia or Ritupa passed into Rituf burh, and so finally into Richborough. Moreover, in a character of King Ethelbert, of Kent, older a good deal than Bæda's time, we find the town described under the mixed form of Hrof-brevi. After such a certain instance of philological blundering as this, I for one am not inclined to place great faith in statements as that made by the English Chronicle about Chichester, which it attributes to the mythical South Saxon King Cissa. Whatever Cissanceaster may mean, it seems to me much more likely that it represents another case of double nam-ing; for though the Roman town was commonly known as Regnum, that is clearly a mere administrative form, derived from the tribal name of the Regni. Considering that the same veracious Chronicle derives Portsmouth, the Roman Portus, from an imaginary Teutonic invader, Port, and commits itself to other wild statements of the same sort, I don't think we need greatly hesitate about rejecting its authority in these earlier and conjectural portions.—The Cornhill Magazine.

How Chinamen Bargain for Wives.

An Australian Chinaman, when anxious to have a wife of his own nation, sends a letter to an agent in Hong Kong. The following is a condensed translation of the epistle:

"I want a wife. She must be a maiden under twenty years of age, and must not have left her father's house. She must have never read a book, and her eye-lashes must be half an inch in length. Her teeth must be as sparkling as the pearls of Ceylon. Her breath must be like unto the scents of the mag-nificent odor groves of Java, and her attire must be from the silken weavers of the Ka Li-Ching, which are on the banks of the greatest river in the world—the ever-flowing Yanktse Kiang."

The price of a Chinese woman delivered in Sidney is $38, but two Chinese women only cost $52; therefore, the heathen Chinese import women in couples. The importer never sees his women before they arrive, and then he generally selects the best-looking one. The other is shown around to a number of well-to-do Chinamen, and, after they have inspected her, she is submitted to what may be called public auction. At a recent sale at Sydney a young girl aged about nineteen was offered, and, after some spirited bidding, she was purchased by wealthy Chinese store-keeper, whose place of business is in one of the leading towns of New South Wales, for $120. The melancholy aspect of the Celestial girl, as she went away in company with the man who purchased her, was deplorable to the last degree.—North China Herald.
